Dear Sir/ Madam,

It has been almost a year since I finished my degree in International Relations. Having accomplished that goal that I had set for myself, I thought that I should focus on the acquisition of other knowledge, more practical, even if not directly related to my field of study. Nowadays I work in a call center in Porto, Portugal and I am pleased to be able to manage stressful situations and great pressure and I consider myself to be well prepared for the professional world. Teamwork spirit is also something that I have been able to improve with this professional experience, since the objectives are achieved as a team, in a continuous effort.

Following this stage of my life I wish I could devote myself more to questions that really matter to me. Environment is one of them! In what concerns me, environment has not yet been given the adequate attention in our society, it deserves more from us. That is why I want to engage myself in this adventure. Engaging in such a project would permit me to put in practice what I learned, both in college and at home, in the countryside.

Furthermore, participate in an international project would allow me to be part in a rich cultural exchange, first, getting to know Iceland and its people, but also, getting to know other volunteers from different countries.

I hope you agree that my qualifications seem to be a match for this position.

I look forward to speaking with you.
